

Foreword

"A writer is simply a photographer of thoughts."

– Brandon A. Trean

Being a bookworm, I like to curl up under my comforter with a book. From the moment I flip over its cover, I enter a whole new world – the mind of the author. Each and every tiny squiggle on the page represents the author's unique thoughts and personal experiences. Via reading, aside from gaining inspiring insights and invaluable knowledge, one can be encouraged to explore his own creativity and soul.

Through reading Dimension, you will be moved by hearty diary entries and letters, stimulated by thorough discussions on current issues and awed by the newest scientific researches. In other words, a wide and diversified array of masterpieces is displayed in this lightweight yet precious booklet. Written by our fellow students, this booklet presents their unlimited creativity and critical thinking skills. Miraculously, they transform the images and views to words to preserve unforgettable moments and meanwhile, allow others to enjoy them as well.

In a bid to sharpen one's writing skills, constant practices are essential. By jotting down pieces of your life and cultivate a habit of writing a journal, it is highly possible for one to express his emotions and feelings accurately with a wise choice of vocabulary in the near future. Then, one will be able to display and contribute their mindsets and ideas with ease.

In summary, Dimension 2013 is definitely worth reading. I am delighted to be shared with these beautiful "snapshots" from people from all walks of life. I hope that everyone will be keen on reading it and be inspired in many ways. After all, a book is a magical portal to another dimension!

Cheung Ashley Wing Man
Po Leung Kuk Laws Foundation College (Class of 2014)